

C1

What does C1 stand for in this context?

Answer: _____

Can you give an example of a C1 level friendship?

Answer: _____

What are some characteristics of a C1 level friendship?

Answer: _____

How often do C1 level friends usually communicate?

Answer: _____

What types of activities C1 level friends typically enjoy?

Answer: _____

What are some challenges of maintaining a C1 level friendship?

Answer: _____

How do C1 level friends resolve conflicts?

Answer: _____

What role does trust play in a C1 level friendship?

Answer: _____

How does a C1 level friendship differ from lower level friendships?

Answer: _____

What are some benefits of having a C1 level friend?

Answer: _____

Answers

What does C1 stand for in this context?

Answer: C1 stands for the highest level of language proficiency.

Can you give an example of a C1 level friendship?

Answer: An example of a C1 level friendship could be two friends who discuss philosophical concepts.

What are some characteristics of a C1 level friendship?

Answer: Characteristics of a C1 level friendship may include mutual respect, intellectual stimulation, and deep conversation.

How often do C1 level friends usually communicate?

Answer: C1 level friends usually communicate regularly, possibly on a daily basis.

What types of activities C1 level friends typically enjoy?

Answer: C1 level friends typically enjoy activities such as debating, analyzing literature, and exploring new ideas.

What are some challenges of maintaining a C1 level friendship?

Answer: Some challenges of maintaining a C1 level friendship may include intellectual disagreements and the need for constant stimulation.

How do C1 level friends resolve conflicts?

Answer: C1 level friends resolve conflicts through open communication, active listening, and a willingness to compromise.

What role does trust play in a C1 level friendship?

Answer: Trust plays a crucial role in a C1 level friendship as it allows for vulnerability and sharing of personal thoughts and feelings.

How does a C1 level friendship differ from lower level friendships?

Answer: A C1 level friendship differs from lower level friendships in terms of the depth and complexity of the conversation and the level of mutual respect and understanding.

What are some benefits of having a C1 level friend?

Answer: Some benefits of having a C1 level friend include personal growth, exposure to different perspectives, and the opportunity to challenge one's own beliefs.