

A1

What is a friendship?

Answer: _____

Why are friendships important?

Answer: _____

How can you make new friends?

Answer: _____

What qualities make a good friend?

Answer: _____

How do you maintain a friendship?

Answer: _____

What are some common friendship problems?

Answer: _____

What can you do if a friend betrays your trust?

Answer: _____

How do you handle conflicts in a friendship?

Answer: _____

Why is communication important in a friendship?

Answer: _____

What are some ways to show appreciation to a friend?

Answer: _____

Answers

What is a friendship?

Answer: A friendship is a close relationship between two or more people.

Why are friendships important?

Answer: Friendships provide support, understanding, and happiness.

How can you make new friends?

Answer: You can make new friends by being open, friendly, and participating in activities you enjoy.

What qualities make a good friend?

Answer: Good friends are trustworthy, kind, supportive, and loyal.

How do you maintain a friendship?

Answer: You can maintain a friendship by staying in touch, being there for each other, and resolving conflicts.

What are some common friendship problems?

Answer: Common friendship problems include disagreements, jealousy, and miscommunication.

What can you do if a friend betrays your trust?

Answer: If a friend betrays your trust, you can talk to them about it and decide if the friendship can be repaired.

How do you handle conflicts in a friendship?

Answer: Conflicts in a friendship can be resolved through open and honest communication, compromise, and forgiveness.

Why is communication important in a friendship?

Answer: Communication is important in a friendship because it helps build trust, resolve conflicts, and express feelings.

What are some ways to show appreciation to a friend?

Answer: You can show appreciation to a friend by expressing gratitude, spending quality time together, and giving compliments.